

ProjectCentre expands into South Australia and strengthens position in Victoria.

Leading national internet project management company, ProjectCentre, has strengthened its Victorian and South Australian presence with two new key appointments.

The fast-emerging Australian owned Company today announced the appointment of Jake Kearsley as a Regional Business Manager and Victoria Davies as a Client Service Executive to service the Victorian/South Australian region. In addition ProjectCentre will open a new Adelaide office.

ProjectCentre is a leading provider of a web-based collaborative project delivery system for the construction industry nationally and internationally.

The company has experienced strong growth of 78% throughout Australia over the past three years.

“Creating a strong national presence is key part of ProjectCentre’s strategic plan,” ProjectCentre’s CEO, Mr Kevin Davis, said today.

“The appointment of Jake and Victoria truly makes a strong statement about the quality of people we are able to attract to our business, and supports our strategy of delivering quality professional services to compliment our software”.

“We also recognize the strong growth of construction projects in Victoria and South Australia, and see ProjectCentre as a significant contributor to their success. ”

Mr Kearsley was most recently Sinclair Knight Merz’s Project Delivery and Strategic Consulting Manager and Defence Client Manager.

He managed a number of projects within the Hardened and Networked Army (HNA) Program in Adelaide.

Prior to that, Mr Kearsley worked with international consulting firm, Booz Allen Hamilton, where he was successful in negotiating several contracts for the group, primarily in the Defence Industry sector.

Mr Davis said “Jake is a highly qualified professional with vast experience in project, contract, and operations management along with proven business development skills. We are delighted to have someone with his high level of professional and strategic knowledge join our team.”

“Jake will be a tremendous addition to support our delivery of thought-leadership and innovative solutions to our rapidly growing portfolio of clients.”

Ms Davis was most recently an assistant project manager with international construction consultants, Davis Langdon, working on projects associated with the Federal Government’s Building the Education Revolution (BER) program, as well in the health sector.

"Someone with Victoria's broad project acumen with involvement in construction projects across education, health, defence and government sectors will enhance our team of project specialist and we are pleased to have her join our team of industry professionals," Mr Davis said.

"Victoria's combined proven talents of managing client relationships along with her hands-on project management skills are exactly what we look for in our Client Service Executives", he said.

"ProjectCentre's approach to business is to provide high quality solutions to our clients with the consultative services along with market leading products.

"Our continued goal is to support our clients, our national teams, and to deliver the highest standards within the industry,".
